

TROPICAL CONSERVATION
& DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA

Tropical Conservation and Development Program (TCD)

Annual Orientation Session Fall 2012

Who

Everyone is welcome to attend! Any student and faculty member with interest in 'conservation and development' whether they are pursuing a TCD certificate or not. If you already consider yourself a TCD student, please invite others that you know who might be interested, especially new students. If you are a faculty member please join us and if you know of existing or incoming students who work with conservation and/or development issues, please encourage them to contact us and attend the event.

What

* To kick off the new academic year, the Tropical Conservation and Development Program (TCD) will hold its Annual Fall Orientation/Information Session for students and faculty.

* For new students, the gathering will provide an opportunity to learn more about the programs; meet core Faculty and get to know other graduate students with interests in conservation and development issues around the world.

* For "veteran" students, the retreat will provide a forum for catching up with friends, meeting and welcoming the new students and getting updates on the programs. TCD activities, events and opportunities will also be discussed.

When

Saturday, August 25th from noon - 5:00pm

Where

UF Smathers Library, Room 1A
