

Tropical Conservation and Development Program (TCD) Annual Orientation/ Gathering Fall 2017

Who

Everyone is welcome to attend! Any student and faculty member with interest in 'conservation and development' whether they are pursuing a TCD certificate or not. If you already consider yourself a TCD student, please invite others that you know who might be interested, especially new students. If you are a faculty member please join us and if you know of existing or incoming students who work with conservation and/or development issues, please encourage them to contact us and attend the event.

What

- * To kick off the new academic year, the Tropical Conservation and Development Program (TCD) will hold its Annual Fall Orientation/Gathering for students and faculty.
- * For new students, the orientation/gathering will provide an opportunity to learn more about the program; meet TCD Faculty and get to know other graduate students with interests in conservation and development issues around the world.
- * For "veteran" students and faculty, the gathering will provide a forum for catching up with friends, meeting and welcoming the new students and getting updates on the programs. TCD activities, events and opportunities will also be discussed.

When

Friday, August 25, 2017 @ 12 to 4:30 pm *

Where

Smathers Library, Room 100

* Lunch included. Please let us know if you plan to attend (tcd@latam.ufl.edu) so we can plan accordingly and have plenty of food for lunch!
